

You're Shooting Video for your Websites. How Do You Share Them?

Someone from a TV station hands you a DVD of someone from your company interviewed on their show. You want to put it on your company website but after a lot of hits on converter software, you feel a bit lost.

Or you create a lot of videos yourself with your Flip HD mini-cam but can't for the life of you figure out how to convert it to a DVD format and get it on a DVD to give to someone.

Then there's getting your videos to your friends with an iPhone.

Enter AVS Video Converter. If you get their whole package for $60 you also get about 16 video and audio creating & editing packages. The Video Converter, alone, is worth it. Find it here at: <http://www.avsmmedia.com/avs-video-converter.aspx>

So if you are getting into videos in any way, this seems like a must-have tool. It's made my work a lot easier.

Here's what the tool's screen has in it. Notice the variety of file formats one can convert to and from.

AVS-Video-Converter-Software-Screen.gif

